Subject - Homicide, New Brunswick, N.J.,
Operative - 312.

312/undercover

November 25, 1922. Continuing on the above matter, Operative proceeded to the Middlesex Lunchroom, arriving there at 8 a.m.

Upon leaving the Middlesex Lunchroom, Operative roamed about Town, visiting various places until about 5.30 p.m., then Operative proceeded to and located in the railroad station.

At about 6.30 p.m. Operative boarded a train and proceeded to Newark, N.J. Upon arrival at Newark, N.J., Operative left the Pennsylvania Railroad train and proceeded to and boarded a D.L. & W. train for Berkley Heights, N.J.

Upon arrival at Berkley Heights, N.J., Operative proceeded to the home of his brother-in-law. Operative's brother-in-law informed Operative that there was a man living up there by the name of McCragin, and that he is a lawyer, furthermore that Mr. McCragin was a school and college chum, and also a close friend of Mr. Mott. Operative's brother-in-law stated that Mr. McCragin had remarked how he had interviewed Mr. Mott, and how Mr. Mott had said that he did not see how an indictment could be brought in against anyone, as the evidence was not strong enough, and that even if an indictment was returned that there was not enough evidence to warrant conviction. Mr. McCragin further stated that Mr. Mott had informed him that the house on the Phillips Farm was furnished up, and that it was used as a place for improper purposes, in other words, it was a sporting house.

The general concensus of opinion about Berkley Heights, is favorable to Mrs. Hall, and the impression is that Mr. Mills could throw considerable light on the case if he cared to.

Operative remained at his brother-in-law's house during the night.
